

Representative Barney Frank is Chairman of the House Committee on Financial Services. He has received more than a half a million dollars from a number of the financial sectors, but being in the House isn't as lucrative as being in the Senate. Here is Chairman Frank's list of financial sector donors during his career. The Center for Responsive Politics notes that these numbers are based on Federal Election Commission data available electronically through April 25,2010.

Top Industries Contributing to
Barney Frank's Congressional Campaigns
Over His Career

Industry	Rank among Top Twenty	Career Total Dollars
Real Estate	#1	$681,508
Securities & Investment	#2	$677,305
Insurance	#3	$632,131
Commercial Banks	#5	$507,550
Miscellaneous Finance	#8	$237,478
Finance/Credit Companies	#13	$148,850
Credit Unions	#20	$86,499

Source: Center for Responsive Politics (OpenSecrets.org)

Representative Spencer Bachus is the Ranking Member (the most senior Republican) on the House Financial Services Committee. He, Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi and Minority Leader John Boehner (the latter two not members of the committee) also received significant campaign contributions from the financial services industry over their careers. These contributions grew as their seniority and influence grew.